Building
Communities, Not Audiences: The Future of the Arts in the U.S, written and edited by Doug Borwick, holds that established arts organizations, for

Access Free Building

practical and moral reasons, need to be more deeply connected to their communities. It serves as an essential primer for any member of the arts community-artist, administrator, board member, patron, or friend-who is interested in the future of the arts in the U.S. It also provides new ways of looking at the arts as a powerful force for building better communities and improving lives. "It is from community that the arts developed and it is in serving communities that the arts will thrive . . .

Access Free Building

Communities do not exist to serve the arts;

Access Free Building

the arts exist to serve communities."

Building

Audiences identifies the factors that serve to isolate established arts organizations from their communities, points out the trends that loom as imminent

threats to the long-term viability of the artistic status quo,

and presents
principles and mechanisms whereby arts organizations can significantly extend their reach into the

Included are case studies and examples of successful

being conducted by

Twenty-three contributors, representing chamber

perspectives provide breadth of coverage.

"The economic, social, and political environments out of which the infrastructure for Western 'high arts' grew have changed.

Today's major arts institutions, products of that legacy, no longer benefit from relatively inexpensive labor, a nominally

Access Free Building

homogeneous culture, or a polity openly managed by an elite class. Expenses are rising precipitously and competition for major donors is increasing; as a result, the survival of established arts organizations hinges on their ability to engage effectively with a far broader

Access Free Building

segment of the population than has been true to date."

From the Foreword by Rocco Landesman, Chairman, National Endowment for the Arts: "I think the days of the arts in ivory towers are behind us;
the very best arts
organizations are . . .
connecting

Access Free Building

Communities with artists Not only can the arts build communities, I think we must." From the Foreword by Robert
L. Lynch, President & CEO, Americans for
the Arts: "Doug Borwick calls for substantive rather than superficial efforts, authentic and systemic changes. . . .

Access Free Building

The challenge is not whether to build communities or audiences but how to build communities and audiences together."

American Finding

metropolitan areas today are divided into neighborhoods of

privilege and poverty, often along lines of ethnicity and race.

City residents

traveling through these neighborhoods

Access Free Building

move from feeling at home to feeling like tourists to feeling so out of place they fear for their security. As Gerald Frug shows, this divided and inhospitable urban landscape is not simply the result of individual choices about where to live or start a business. It is the product of government policies--and, in

From The Inside
particular, the policies rules. A Harvard law And Lizing A

professor and leading Community A
expert on urban affairs, Frug presents the first-ever analysis of how legal rules
shape modern cities and outlines a set of alternatives to bring down the walls that

Access Free Building

now keep city dwellers apart. Frug begins by describing how American law treats cities as subdivisions of states and shows how this arrangement has encouraged the separation of metropolitan residents into different, sometimes hostile groups. He explains in

Access Free Building

clear, accessible language the divisive impact of rules about zoning, redevelopment, land use, and the organization of such city services as education and policing. He pays special attention to the underlying role of anxiety about strangers, the widespread desire for good schools, and the pervasive fear of crime. Ultimately,

Access Free Building

Frug calls for replacing the current legal definition of cities with an alternative based on what he calls "community building"--an alternative that gives cities within the same

Access Free Building

metropolitan region incentives to forge closer links with each other. An incisive study of the legal roots of today's urban problems, City Making is also an optimistic and compelling blueprint for enabling American cities once again to embrace their historic role of helping people reach

Access Free Building

an accommodation with those who live in the same geographic area, no matter how dissimilar they are.

This is a time when organizations must develop far deeper relationships with customers. But they don't know how this is done profitably and at scale. This book will help usher confused organizations into a new future where community and profit mutually support one another. Carrie Melissa Jones and Charles H. Vogl highlight companies succeeding (Airbnb, Reddit, Apple, Toyota Motor Company, etc.) and those who are failing (left

Access Free Building

Access Free Building

(anonymous). The authors clarify the structural differences between authentic brand community and simple marketing, social media, and platform projects.

Their book outlines brand community strategies and models for organizations that will help them create communities that make the world a better place for the organization's stakeholders and everyone else.

Organizational leaders will gain the skills to distinguish how communities differ when serving marketing, innovation, advocacy, recruitment, retention, and social support goals and choose how best to succeed

with their own goal-

Building Communities
of Engaged Readers

Access Free Building

highlights the concept of 'Reading Teachers' who are not only knowledgeable about texts for children, but are aware of their own reading identities and prepared to share their enthusiasm and understanding of what being a reader means. Sharing the processes of reading with young readers is an innovative approach to developing new generations of readers. Examining the interplay between the 'will and the skill' to read, the book distinctively details a reading for pleasure pedagogy and demonstrates that reader engagement is strongly influenced by relationships between children, teachers, families and communities.

Access Free Building

Importantly it provides compelling evidence that reciprocal reading communities in school encompass: a shared concept of what it means to be a reader in the 21st century; considerable teacher

Access Free Building

and child knowledge of children's literature and other texts; pedagogic practices which acknowledge and develop diverse reader identities; spontaneous 'inside-text talk' on the part of all members; a shift in the focus of control and new social spaces that encourage choice and

Access Free Building

Children's rights as readers. Written by experts in the literacy field and illustrated throughout with examples from the project schools, it is essential reading for all those concerned with improving young people's enjoyment of and attainment in reading.
