Palaeopathology of Aboriginal Australians is an example of the paradox researchers in palaeoanthropology are constantly confronted by - the use of small amounts of data to explain wide ranging theories. Webb mentions this problem in his introduction

Aboriginal Health - Aboriginal Studies Resources Aboriginal health is majorly determined by several social factors that are related to their cultural beliefs.
Health professionals regularly find it difficult to provide health care to aboriginal people due to the cultural disparity that exists between the conventional and aboriginal cultures, predominantly with regard to systems of health belief (Carson, Dunbar, &
